JASON GARSIDE

Name: Jason Garside

Job Title: Head Of Client Development

Joined Linbrooke: September 2009

Career Background

Jason joined the Royal Marines at the age of 17, completing eight years of service. As a result of injuries sustained in Afghanistan, Jason was medically discharged and subsequently needed to embark on a new career.

Training courses attended

Jason undertook the 3667 Network Engineering course, the REC certificate in Recruitment Practice, a sales training course and numerous internal courses to aid his career progression and skills development.

Why Linbrooke?

Jason approached and visited many companies offering training courses and potential employment, but Linbrooke was the first choice for Jason due to its unparalleled reputation for caring for the welfare of ex-military personnel.

“Undertaking my current role has been a great challenge. The position has helped me understand the full cycle of the business whilst giving me confidence to take business critical decision. In addition, it has improved my strategic thinking capabilities for business development.”

Linbrooke Career

Jason has undertaken a number of roles during his career at Linbrooke, including Cable Team Leader, Telecoms Engineer, Site Supervisor, Assistant Project Manager and Resource Manager for ntrs.

Within his current role at ntrs, Jason has been tasked with the challenge of growing the resourcing business of ntrs as a stand-alone division within Linbrooke.
